Further history of the activities of the New Haven in the acquisition of steamship lines made up the evidence at the trial yesterday of the road's eleven former directors on a charge of conspiring to monopolize New England land and water transportation. Yesterday's evidence brought the wateline dealings down to the period of the fight with Charles W. Morse, when he was trying to build up his coastwise trade.

The fellows
Come Smiling for More
Of course we know that it pleases a man (when he buys a suit) to be told "that it is worth every bit of $80, sir!"
Yet when you buy a $20 suit here we say "this suit, sir, sells for $20, and is worth every bit of $20."

Just that—but it works like a charm. They are selling more men's suits and overcoats at $15, $20 and $25 than ever before.
And the fellows are coming back smiling for more!

LYNCH WILL HOLD FIRE CONFERENCE

Orders Commission Meeting to Take Up Five Story Building Problem.

FREE LUNCHES COST
DEPARTMENT $12,000

Supervising Inspector Admits Men "Could Throw Reports in River" Without Detection.

District Attorney Crosby, at the investigation yesterday into the Diamond Candy Factory fire that cost twelve lives, brought out the fact that the State Industrial Commission allows its inspectors wide discretionary powers. He also suggested that the commission could increase its working appropriation by more than $12,000 by compelling its sixty-five inspectors to pay for their lunches, instead of charging them to the city, as is now done.

Coroner Wagner opened the fourth day of the inquiry by calling James M. Lynch, chairman of the State Industrial Commission. The district attorney immediately took up the examination where it ended Wednesday afternoon by asking Lynch if he had succeeded in finding out the cause of the fire.

At the close of the session the evidence dealt with the negotiations for the sale of the Harvard and Yale of the New England service into service on the Pacific Coast.

DENTIFRICES "FAKES," IS CHEMIST'S CHARGE

Professor Gies Says Decay
Prevention Claims Are False.

Dr. W. J. Gies, professor of biological chemistry at Columbia University, addressing the New York section of the American Chemical Society in Rumford Hall, 50 East Forty-first Street, last night, said there was not a dentifrice on the market today that is what its makers claim on their wrappings.

"These manufacturers claim their dentifrices will prevent decay," said Dr. Gies. "As a matter of fact, decay comes to-day, not from positively what particular germ causes decay of the teeth. A dentifrice can no more prevent decay than can washing the body with soap and water insure one against catching typhoid or other bad ills. A dentifrice is merely a surface cleanser, and not what the manufacturers claim."

Attacking the manufacturers of proprietary medicines, Dr. Gies said:

"I know of countless instances where officials have been approached by unscrupulous manufacturers, soliciting their aid in disseminating the public. These men have offered tempting sums of money for testimonials. In the twenty years I have been connected with Columbia University I do not know of a single instance where a Columbia official has betrayed the trust reposed in him by the public."

That the industrial commission's inspectors have been in charge of the investigation, despite the existence of the office of supervising inspector, assistant chief and chief inspector, and that an inspector can "throw a complaint into the river" without detection, was the testimony of Charles B. Ash, the supervising inspector in charge of Brooklyn, Queens and most of Long Island.

Nine Men for Ten Districts.

Mr. Ash testified that for ten inspectors to be in charge of ten districts, as the law requires, would be practically impossible, as the districts were too large. He said that the law required that there be one inspector for every ten districts, but that in practice, there were only nine inspectors for ten districts.
